

Position: Senior Medical Writer
Location: North West London
Salary: £38,760 - £50,388
Hours: 40hrs per week, flexible (will consider part-time hours)

This is a fantastic opportunity for an experienced Senior Medical Writer to join our award-winning team.

Working within the medical writing team the ideal candidate will have previous experience in a scientific writing role as a client-facing scientific/medical writer. Demonstration of previous high-quality writing/editorial experience is essential. Desirable skills include the ability to multi-task whilst setting and meeting deadlines, good attention to detail and flexibility in working style.

Your role will be at a senior level in the medical writing team. This will include providing editorial support and working on project-orientated tasks. Including, but not limited to, writing a variety of scientific documents including training materials, slide kits, conference abstracts/posters, outputs of advisory boards and scientific symposia, and manuscript writing.

Mentoring/management of junior team members will be required. You will receive on-the-job training on various tasks during your development with a view to performing them more independently and to a high standard thereafter.

You will have 4+ years' experience, a relevant degree/PhD and experience in mentoring or managing junior team members.
